Community Forum on Changes Proposed for PreK – 8 Schools

by Joan Whelan

In a presentation that for some raised more questions than it answered, Dr. William Hite, deputy superintendent of education for Prince George's County, sought community input for a proposed move to a pre-kindergarten to grade 8 configuration in a number of elementary schools in the county.

In a community forum at Eleanor Roosevelt High School on November 5, Hite outlined the broad strokes of the proposed plan in a presentation entitled Promoting Academic Success Through Programmatic Enhancements and Boundary Adjustments.

Each of the three scenarios outlined in the proposal envision Greenbelt Elementary as a PK-8 neighborhood school while Magnolia and Springhill Lake Elementary schools would be PK-5 neighborhood schools feeding into Greenbelt Middle School.

County Changes

Depending on the scenario, between 21 and 39 schools across the county would become PK-8 neighborhood schools, and another five to seven schools would

County Schools Format Update

At the Board of Education meeting on November 12, Superintendent John Deasy presented – for discussion only – a modified proposed plan for some schools differing from what was proposed at the Community Forum on November 5. In this version the school system will apply more rigorous standards for schools eligible for switching to pre-kindergarten to grade 8. Under the new standards Greenbelt Elementary (along with a few other schools) would not be eligible and would not make the switch. GES would be PK-5 instead and flow into Greenbelt Middle School. At the board meeting Deasy also outlined proposed timing for the implementation of the plan which would be carried out in stages and would not impact this part of the county for three to five years.

Deasy obtained consent for this revised plan to be presented formally to the school board at its December meeting.

become PK-8 dedicated or magnet schools offering Montessori, language immersion or performing arts focused education. It was not clear whether the Robert Goddard Montessori and French Immersion PK-8 programs, currently housed on the same site, would receive dedicated sites under the plan.

PK-6 schools would be phased out entirely with remaining elementary schools – between 91-103 depending on the scenario – transitioning to a PK-5 configuration instead. Meanwhile all remaining middle schools would be expanded from grades 7-8 to include grade 6 as well.

Concept Not Plan

Highlighting the proposed plan's more efficient matching of school children to available seats to reduce overcrowding, Hite conceded the proposal is lacking in detail. He clarified for the

Five Incumbents Reelected To Council, Take their Seats

by James Giese

The 36th Greenbelt City Council took office on Monday, November 11. All members had also served for the previous two years – Judith Davis, Rodney Roberts, Konrad Herling, Edward Putens and Leta Mach. After the Greenbelt City Clerk certified the final count for the election and the winners thereof, Davis, as former mayor, administered the oath of office to the new council.

As required by the city charter, the new council's first order of business was to select one of its members as mayor. Upon the motion of Rodney Roberts, council unanimously elected Davis as mayor for her sixth term. Roberts was again elected as mayor pro tem. Clerk of the Seventh Judicial Circuit Court Peggy Magee administered the oath of office to Davis.

O. B. Pinkney, municipal liaison for County Executive Jack Johnson, attended the brief ceremony. A small group of well-wishers also was present. Following the meeting, which lasted about half an hour, a celebration cake and refreshments were served.

Each councilmember, beginning with Davis, made a brief statement during the meeting. All thanked their campaign workers and the citizens who voted in the election. They expressed appreciation for the hospitality received and comments made by residents as the candidates campaigned around town knocking on doors.

The two unsuccessful candidates, Ruth Kastner and Kelly Ivy, were also commended for their participation in the campaign with Mach expressing the hope that there would be even more challengers the next time around.

Mayor's Remarks

Davis gave special recognition to the Board of Elections, City Clerk Kathleen Gallagher and the election judges and workers for running a smooth election. She also thanked the media for giving the candidates the opportunity to express themselves on city issues.

Davis said some people had criticized her for doing too much as mayor. She said she had the time and energy to go the extra mile in her job. "If my being active has raised the bar for whoever may become mayor, that will be a good thing," she said.

She said she had expected to hear a good deal of citizen expression about taxes as she campaigned door to door. While there were such expressions, she said there was more concern

U.S. District Judge Alexander Williams, Jr., ruled on November 7 that the Inter-county Connector had been satisfactorily reviewed and approved by the Environmental Protection Agency and Federal Highway Administration. He denied the appeals made by the Audubon Naturalist Society and other environmental groups. Maryland Transportation Secretary John Porcari announced that construction would begin shortly on the $4.2 billion project.

American Education Week November 11 to 17, 2007

In a celebration of American education these columns will continue to tell the stories of selected teachers from the schools that service the Greenbelt community. Last week Greenbelt Elementary School teachers were featured; this week readers will get a glimpse inside St. Hugh's School and Greenbelt Nursery School.

In coming weeks there will be stories from Greenbelt Middle School, Eleanor Roosevelt High School and Springhill Lake and Magnolia Elementary Schools.

Van Den Bossche Instills Love of Learning in Pupils

by Jeanette Der Bedrosian

Margo Van Den Bossche, a third grade teacher at St. Hugh's School, pointed to a poster in her classroom that reads, "You may never make a discovery if you're afraid to make mistakes." The poster, which has a picture of a light bulb on it, teaches an important lesson on failure, Van Den Bossche said.

"Thomas Edison . . . didn't make the light bulb the very first time he tried. He kept working at it, and every time he made a mistake, every time it blew up, he learned something different from it," she said. "We learn sometimes better from our mistakes than we do from our successes."

Van Den Bossche, who has taught at St. Hugh's for just over six years and is in her fourth year of teaching the third grade, said the willingness to make mistakes is something that she tries to teach her students. Beyond this, she said she tries to instill a love for learning and an optimism for the future within her students.

A lifelong learner herself, Van Den Bossche has taken courses at the University of Evansville in Indiana, Augusta State University in Georgia, Trinity College in the District of Columbia and the

St. Hugh's Teacher Helps Students to Love Science

St. Hugh's teacher Marjorie Sparks said she heard a knock on her door at 10 p.m. one night. When she opened the door, she saw a group of her eighth graders arguing over constellations, a subject they were in the middle of learning in Sparks' class. They needed her to settle the argument, she said.

"Middle school children are on that cusp of going from very concrete knowledge to a little more abstract," she said of her sixth, seventh and eighth grade students. "Watching them going through that process and starting to think for themselves, not just accepting everything you say as gospel but taking it in and then applying it somewhere, is really very rewarding," she said.

Sparks, who teaches science and social studies to these middle schoolers, has taught at St. Hugh's for 23 years, something Principal Christopher Trott said is a testament to her dedication to the school and community.

Marjorie Sparks

"She's been through thick and thin with the school. She knows the school in and out," he said, noting that Sparks is someone he turns to when he needs information about the school.

Greenbelt Wildlife

Pardon me if I pop a few buttons and boast, even though I did nothing to earn what I consider a distinction. There was a coyote circling my home at high noon on Friday, November 9. This is my city home on Fayette Place, just off Greenhill, not some country cabin.

Sitting in the living room reading in front of the picture window, out of the corner of my eye I saw “something large” trotting from the bedroom side of my home over the lawn to the sidewalk. I immediately stood up and stared as my jaw dropped. This was not a dog. If eyes can pop out of their sockets, then mine did.

From the sidewalk it turned onto my driveway and continued through the wooden gate propped slightly open. I followed it by way of dining room and kitchen windows. As I reached the back porch it was romping through my back yard. It circled the pond and then exited through the gate secured by a pitifully stretched bungee cord. Down the culvert, up the other side, disappearing into the wooded area.

No way this was a fox, red or gray. No bushy tail. I’ve seen and watched fox before. It was tall. Tail dark and hung down during the entire romp. Legs tan. Body blackish with some red and white. Eyes were piercing and face very narrow and long.

Although I’ll now be more alert when in my yard and neighborhood, I feel privileged to add coyote to my rabbit, ’possum, raccoon and red fox visitors. I once had lake ducks and the great blue heron visit, too.

THANKS

The friends and family of the David Craig Memorial Scholarship Fund (DCMSF) would like to thank the Greenbelt Tennis Association (GTA) for their generous donation from the annual David Craig Tennis Tournament. The GTA has been a wonderful supporter both financially and physically for years and we greatly appreciate the visibility they give us each fall with their tournament and funding. A big thanks to Bill Wilkerson and Emmett Jordan, along with the entire membership.

The scholarship, which is awarded every May in David’s memory, is given to a senior from Eleanor Roosevelt High School. With the gifts we receive from individuals and organizations we are currently disbursing $10,000. The fund is a nonprofit corporation and all gifts are tax deductible. The fund is recognized by the United Way Program #14153. Those who would like to support the fund may send donations to P.O. Box 761, Greenbelt, MD 20768.

The Greenbelt Recreation Department was again involved with providing the fund with a donation from the David Craig home run hitting contest, which is a yearly part of the Labor Day Softball Tournament. This year’s contest raised $80 as the players participating contribute to the fund and a 50/50 payout is given to the winner and second place finisher. The 2007 Home Run Champion was Butch Reed with 5 (B.O.D) and runner up was Danny Taylor with 4 (Remingtons). Third place went to local Greenbelter Scott Lubey, who led most of the way with 3.

We thank the recreation staffers for their support in this event and feel blessed that we can provide educational assistance to today’s young scholars.

The DCMSF was established in 1984 and has been awarding a scholarship to one recipient every year since. David’s memory is going strong with several past recipients now serving on the board of directors and the fund granting a $2,500 payout for four years for a total of $10,000 in college tuition assistance.

A big thank you to the Greenbelt community for making this possible.

Doug Mangum,
President DCMSF

THANKS

With the election behind us, I would like to take this time to recognize all those who voted in the election – every vote counts. During the campaign, I appreciated meeting and talking with many citizens and hearing your thoughts and concerns. Thank you to everyone who supported me in my re-election to City Council. I promise to work hard, listen attentively and always consider and act in the best interests of the city. The spirit of Greenbelt is great and together we can make it better.

Grandma's Thanksgiving pie"

On Screen

Dark, Amusing Coen Tale

Ethan and Joel Coens’ latest movie is a screen adaptation of the Cormac McCarthy novel, “No Country for Old Men.” Josh Brolin is a hunter who happens across corpses, cash and heroin near Texas’ border with Mexico – and walks off with the cash. Javier Bardem and Woody Harrelson are hit men sent by the drug lords to recover their money and Tommy Lee Jones is the sheriff on the case.

This tale is as dark as any the Coen brothers have told but McCarthy’s dialogue provides some of the comedic leavening you’d expect from the makers of “Fargo.” Still, the film earns its R rating with extremely graphic violence; runtime is 122 minutes.

Ways to Identify a Coyote

- Black tip on end of tail distinguishes it from a fox;
- Coyotes let their tails hang down, unlike dogs which carry their tails out or curled up over their backs;
- In our area coyotes should be about 25 to 30 pounds, about the size of a mid-size dog;
- Coyote stools are ropy with lots of hair and bones;
- Coyote paw prints are oval with two front claw marks showing, while dog prints are more circular;
- Coyotes walk in a straight line, unlike dogs which tend to walk less straight.

Our sympathy to the family of longtime Greenbelt resident Lillian Williams, who died November 6, 2007, at the age of 91. She would have been 92 in December. Mrs. Williams lived at Green Ridge House for almost 20 years; more recently, she had been at the Lutheran Home. In 1991, when her grandsons Michael and Eric Stern moved from Greenbelt, Mrs. Williams took over the boys’ Greenbelt News Review route and delivered the paper to Lakewood residents for more than 10 years. Her daughter Tamara told how much her mother enjoyed and looked forward to that job; she always made sure the paper was delivered on Friday mornings.

Greenbelters were saddened to learn of the death of Bob Bicknell, Sr., on August 26, 2007, in Leonardtown. When Mr. Bicknell lived here he worked at Berwyn Sunoco and coached Greenbelt’s Little League, Babe Ruth Baseball and Boys Club Basketball for 24 years.

Congratulations to former Greenbelter Alfonso Geiger and Eleanor Friend, who married on Saturday, November 10, 2007, in the chapel at Riderwood.

Happy 95th birthday to longtime Greenbelter Jean D’Esposito, now of Green Ridge House. Mrs. D’Esposito and her late husband George moved to 13-Q Ridge Road in the early 1940s. There was a gala family celebration on November 11, the actual birthday date, at the Lakewood home of Jean’s daughter Mary Ann Hawk. Son Stephen D’Esposito also lives in Greenbelt.

Congratulations and best wishes to Fred and Dorothy Baluch, who celebrated their 60 years of marriage at a November 10 party in the Greenbelt Community Center. All eight children and many friends attended. The Baluchs lived in Greenbelt for 30 years before moving to their farm in Freeport, Ohio, in 1986. They were married June 14, 1947, in Youngstown, Ohio. The couple will be staying with family in Greenbelt for several more months.

It’s a new grandson for Paula and Bob Luddy of Lastner Lane. Colin Joseph Luddy made his appearance October 8, 2007, at Greater Baltimore Medical Center. He weighed in at 7 lbs. 5 oz. His parents are Shawn and Valerie Luddy, who live in Bel Air. Shawn grew up on Lastner Lane and graduated from Eleanor Roosevelt High School. Colin joins 4-year-old brother Kyle. Uncle Scott currently lives in Durham, N.C., with his wife Cindy, 11-year-old Troy and 4-year-old Kate.

Send us your reports of new babies, awards, honors, etc. to share with our readers. We’d especially like to hear more from our neighbors in Greenbelt East and Springhill Lake. To send information for “Our Neighbors” email us at newsreview@greenbelt.com or leave a message at 301-474-6892.

St. Hugh Cantor Performs at Clarice Smith

Andrew Adelsberger, head cantor at St. Hugh Catholic Church, will be singing in the world premiere of “Later the Same Evening – An Opera Inspired by the Paintings of Edward Hopper.” The opera, in English, is at the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center at the University of Maryland (UM) this weekend. There is a fee. There will also be a free performance at the National Gallery of Art on December 2.

The opera focuses on five of Hopper’s paintings, imagining the lives of the figures in the paintings and connecting them on one evening in New York City in 1932. For those familiar with Hopper’s works, Adelsberger sings the role of Gus O’Neil, the man reading the newspaper in “Room in New York.” The opera is a joint project of the UM School of Music, the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center and the National Gallery which currently is offering a comprehensive exhibition of Hopper’s work through January 21.

Adelsberger is a graduate of Catholic University’s School of Music and is currently working on his master’s degree in opera performance with the Maryland Opera Studio at UM. He has been affiliated with St. Hugh for five years. In addition to his cantoring, he is the bass section leader in the church choir. Adelsberger performs regularly in the area.

Learn About Islam

GIVE THANKS

Every breath that we breathe is a blessing from God and we learn from the Prophet Solomon (peace be upon him) to recognize these blessings each day. The Holy Qur'an tells us how he never forgot to be thankful to God. He is quoted to have said, "This is by the grace of my Lord, to test me whether I am grateful or ungrateful! And if any is grateful, it is (a gain) for his own soul; but if any is ungrateful, truly my Lord is free of all needs, supreme in honor."
– The Holy Qur'an, 27:40

Count your blessings every day. For more information about gratefulness from an Islamic perspective, call 301-982-9463 or email info@searchislam.org or visit www.searchislam.org.

100 or so community members assembled that the proposed plan is in the conceptual stages only and that more information will be available if and when the Board of Education approves the concept.

He specifically invited comments from the community using a workshop format, dividing attendees into small groups to discuss questions, concerns and recommended next steps for the school system.

Community Input

Overall, the proposal to move to a PK-8 configuration in select schools was favorably received. Many community members cited personal experiences or beliefs that support the move. However, participants overwhelmingly requested more information on timing, costs and how such a sweeping plan would be implemented, including whether the proposed changes may create pockets of overcrowding in parts of the county.

Greenbelt Mayor Judith Davis, in attendance at the forum, specifically asked that planned development be considered in enrollment calculations.

Because shifts to the number of grade levels feeding into any given school would occur without any changes in the number of classrooms in that school, some boundary changes will likely occur in order to adjust enrollment. Community members asked for more clarity on this issue before final decisions are made by the board. Boundary shifts would not only directly affect families but could affect the demographic characteristics of some schools, reducing the level of diversity.

Continuity of programs was a key issue as well. Parents of children in magnet or dedicated schools wanted assurances that their children would be allowed to continue at the schools they currently attend and not be pulled from productive learning environments where they felt solid connections.

Parents of children in schools such as Greenbelt Elementary that are likely to undergo boundary changes in expanding to PK-8 expressed similar concerns.

Two-Track System

Arguing for the PK-8 scenarios, some parents noted the benefits of going through the troubled middle school years in a familiar environment, surrounded by students, teachers and a school administration that have known them, quite possibly, for years. Other parents, arguing for the traditional middle school configuration, noted the educational resources such as science, theater and music facilities it is possible to provide to the larger student bodies in middle schools.

Both scenarios have their advantages and educational outcomes associated with each middle school configuration are still an unknown. What is known now is simply that if one of the scenarios presented on November 5 is approved and implemented, students in Greenbelt will be provided two very different middle school experiences, depending on about future growth that could bring about urbanization and affect public safety.

She noted that the upcoming budget will be a problem for the council to deal with, as the cost of doing business is increasing. She anticipated passage of a tax relief measure for lower income citizens which, depending on state legislation, would become effective next year, if not this year.

“The new council must face these challenges and turn them into opportunities,” she said.

Davis is looking forward to a visionary process that council will be initiating in January. The council will be going to all three sectors of the city to listen to residents’ views of their vision for Greenbelt.

Davis concluded by noting that she is not a native of Greenbelt. However, after being here for 32 years, she said, “Greenbelt is definitely my home.”

Other Remarks

Roberts gave special mention in his thank yous to campaign worker Yoni Siegel who walked more than 10 miles one day passing out campaign flyers for him. He said he had knocked on every door in GHI as well as on doors throughout the city.

He said that this year he had taken advantage of a change in the city electioneering law that permits campaigning within 150 feet of polling places and had spent most of election day greeting voters in Greenbelt East. “If I run again I’ll be out there again because it was a really great experience.”

Herling said he would work to build a more unified community with all its diversity and to bring the original Greenbelt planning concepts to the rest of the city. Some of his specific goals are to revitalize Roosevelt Center, beautify the city’s lakes, improve cross-city transit and provide affordable housing opportunities for lower-income people.

Putens noted that he was now serving his 27th year on council. That many years is a long time to be knocking on doors, he said. From this he learned that council needs to do a better job in keeping its citizens informed.

“We need to ease the fear and learn to accept each other,” he said. He advocated building more bridges, not tearing any down.

Mach said she found campaigning to be enjoyable. She found citizens were concerned for their safety. Others, she found, were not so concerned about the city taxes as they were in getting the most for their money.

Mach expressed her interest in the planned visionary process and receiving the results of this year’s election questionnaire. “I look forward to expanding the possibilities for our town,” she concluded.

Congratulations to the winners of our recent City Council election and best wishes for a productive and rewarding term.

Verizon Offers Cell Phone Recycling Tips

Verizon Wireless is encouraging wireless users to help make a difference by recycling no-longer-used wireless phones, batteries and equipment. Verizon Wireless, the first wireless carrier in the country to collect and recycle old wireless phones, offers the following tips on how to go green and save money, the environment and possibly someone's life with no-longer-used cell phones.

Recycle

Consumers and businesses can recycle their no-longer-used wireless phones through the Verizon Wireless HopeLine program. HopeLine accepts wireless phones, batteries and accessories in any condition from any manufacturer or service provider. Drop off no-longer-used phones, batteries and accessories at any Verizon Wireless Communications Store and the company will dispose of them in an environmentally sound way.

HopeLine has kept more than 200 tons of electronics waste and batteries out of landfills, collected nearly 4.4 million wireless phones and properly disposed of more than one million wireless phones.

Reuse

Phones collected through HopeLine are refurbished, resold and reused whenever possible. Proceeds from HopeLine are used to provide wireless phones and cash grants for shelters and nonprofit organizations that focus on domestic violence prevention and awareness. HopeLine has donated more than $4 million in cash grants to shelters and nonprofit organizations; more than 45,000 phones with airtime and other features to domestic violence prevention organizations; and made more than $140,000 in grants in the past two years to support domestic violence prevention programs in the Washington Metropolitan region.

Reduce

When left plugged in, empty cell phone chargers consume standby or "phantom" energy – the same goes for all chargers. To help save energy and energy costs, consumers should plug all electronic chargers into a power strip and switch it off when the chargers are not in use. The U.S. Department of Energy estimates appliances and home electronics are responsible for about 20 percent of a typical home's energy bill. Unplugging appliances, electronics and chargers when not in use can save each household hundreds of dollars a year.

The nearest Verizon Wireless locations to Greenbelt are the stores in College Park (10250 Baltimore Avenue, Suite A) and Lanham (9453 Annapolis Road, Enterprise Plaza) and in the Beltsville Circuit City store at 11011 Baltimore Avenue. For other store locations and additional information about HopeLine visit www.verizonwireless.com/hopeline.

Smithsonian Food Show Visits Bowie

Belair Mansion will be the site for the local showing of "Key Ingredients: America by Food," a Smithsonian Institution traveling exhibit delving into historical, regional and social traditions that merge in everyday meals and celebrations of the American table. The exhibit will run from November 17 through January 5, giving visitors an opportunity to celebrate the region's food heritage. Belair Mansion is at 12207 Tulip Grove Drive in Bowie.

Related exhibits will be on display at the Old Town Bowie Welcome Center (8606 Chestnut Avenue), the Radio and Television Museum (2608 Mitchellville Road) and the Belair Stable (2835 Belair Drive).

Through artifacts, photographs and illustrations, Key Ingredients examines how culture, ethnicity, landscape and tradition influence foods and flavors enjoyed across the nation. The exhibition looks at the evolution of the American kitchen and how food industries have responded to technological innovations that enabled Americans to choose an ever-wider variety of frozen, prepared and fresh foods.

An interactive website, www.keyingredients.org, has been developed and invites people across the country to share their own family recipes and food stories, learn about other food traditions and identify small town favorites.

Key Ingredients is part of Museum on Main Street, a collaboration between the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES), state Humanities Councils across the country and local host institutions. Check the website www.cityofbowie.org/museum or call 301-809-3089 for further information about the local displays.

Parents and Staff Keep Nursery School Thriving

by Lindsey Warne

At first glance, Greenbelt Nursery School might appear comparable to any other nursery school. There are children taking naps or playing with toy trucks. The walls are lined with finger-painted pictures and laughter echoes through the halls.

But unlike other nursery schools, Greenbelt Nursery School, located at 15 Crescent Road, is a cooperative, which means that it depends directly on parents' participation and dedication in order to create success.

On top of monthly fees, parents are expected to contribute the equivalent of $200 in fundraising to the school, either through helping with housekeeping, serving on a committee or working directly in a classroom alongside teaching staff.

"The unifying theme for all nursery school cooperatives is the belief in parent involvement," Director Lisa Meyer said.

Early Days

Greenbelt Nursery School is one of the oldest cooperatives in Greenbelt and one of the oldest teaching cooperatives in Maryland. In 1941 a group of Greenbelt parents conducted a survey given to all parents with preschool-aged children to determine if a cooperative nursery school would be in the community's interest. The results showed that interest for this type of school was very high but many parents indicated the inability to pay even a small monthly charge.

After the Greenbelt City Council gave permission for the use of a basement located at 14 Parkway Drive and loaned the school $150 for the purchase of equipment and supplies, Greenbelt Nursery School officially opened on April 15, 1942. The school served 31 students, charged $4 per month for tuition and required that parents participate in fundraisers to help keep the school operational. The school was incorporated as a nonprofit organization in 1958 and moved to its present location in the Greenbelt Community Center in 1995.

Both Meyer and Roya Bauman, the office administrators, began their involvement when their children attended the preschool.

"Being a parent here was great for getting to know people in the same situation," Bauman said. "After this, kids will be split into different schools but while they're here you're able to develop wonderful relationships with other parents."

Bauman even spoke of cooperative babysitting groups that were formed among parents.

Today

The school, which Meyer calls a "warm and friendly place" and "built on love," currently serves 82 children, ages two to four, for the 2007-2008 academic school year. The programs vary in length of time for each age group but Meyer said the most common program is half a day.

The school has three classrooms with areas set up for different activities. Each classroom typically serves 18 children with one to two parent volunteers aiding the eight paid teachers, who all have four-year degrees and at least 12 credits of Early Child Development, Meyer said.

"The teachers are the backbone of this school," she said. "Parents look to them for direction."

Board of Directors President LaShel Baravechia, the parent of a four-year-old child who attends the school, said that she has a lot more patience and understanding of their world since she has worked at the school.

"This is very new for me. I knew I wanted to be involved in upbringing from the inside out and not just through flyers that come through the mailbox," she said. "It has changed my viewpoint and how I interact with my child and other children."

Baravechia plans on staying next year, even though her son is graduating from the preschool. She also has decided to go back to school to get her teaching certificate because of her time spent within the classroom.

Unique Setting

Although the preschool is predominantly overseen by women, Baravechia said that there are three or four stay-at-home dads this year who also participate in the classroom setting.

"A lot of kids, both boys and girls, seem to gravitate towards these male figures," she said.

Greenbelt Nursery School is "very healthy financially" and hasn't recently been threatened by economic troubles, Meyer said.

"This school is an institution in Greenbelt," she said. Some parents went to the preschool as kids and now have their own children attending the school. "Generations keep coming back," Bauman said. "Some families just continue to come and go for years."

According to Councilmember Rodney Roberts, the school is "probably the most unique nursery school. All of the parents really take part in what's going on there. The parents are what keep it going."

Parent Cooperative Preschools International, a non-profit international council, indicates on their website that there are at least 32 cooperative preschools throughout the country with three located in Maryland. The other two are in Rockville and Linthicum.

"Greenbelt is a really unique place," Roberts said. "You don't find that many cooperatives in many places. People are more active in this community."

school, Sparks has developed a definitive teaching style as well as a variety of programs for her students.

One program she said she has gotten the students involved with is The JASON Project, a program developed by NASA that "connects students with great explorers and great events to inspire and motivate them to learn science," according to the program's website, www.jason.org.

Through JASON, Sparks said she has had students study the science and history of areas such as Hawaii, the Everglades, Louisiana and Alaska. Four of her students were chosen to become student argonauts, a position that gives students the opportunity to work with scientists out in the field, she said.

"I want [my students] to want to learn more about things, to be curious about the world around them and to have a thirst for knowledge," Sparks said. To achieve this, she said she uses hands-on activities and differentiated learning, which caters to each student's individual learning style.

Sparks, who has attended the University of Maryland, Bowie State University and Trinity College, said she knew from when she was little that she wanted to work with children.

"She's helped to make a very tough academic program and has helped to get many students prepared for high school science," Trott said. "We have a lot of students who come back and say that Mrs. Sparks provided them with all the solid foundations in science that they'll need when they get to high school."

College of Notre Dame in Baltimore. She said she originally went to school to study fine arts but eventually realized that her grandfather's suggestion of a career in teaching was the right path for her.

Van Den Bossche said she tries to teach her students that learning should not be something that students dread but rather a lifelong quest for information. It is this energy and enthusiasm about teaching that Principal Christopher Trott says makes her such an outstanding teacher.

"What she does in the classroom is above and beyond the call of duty, many times," Trott said. He said he is especially impressed with her ability to develop her students' writing through creative projects, such as having the children create a menu with detailed descriptions for each item.

For Van Den Bossche's 15 students this year, she said, progress is measured in "oh" moments. "Every day when I have a child get one of those - we call them 'oh' moments - that's a success," she said, on what makes her feel a sense of accomplishment in the classroom. "When they finally make that connection and they make it on their own, that's a success. It's not always the big [achievements], it's those special moments."
